Summary: Jack finally returns, only to that his best friend couldn't see him any more. Short One shot.

Hiccup!

Where was I? The last thing I remembered was going out to play with my best friendâ€¦Hiccup! What had happened to him? I gotta get out of here.

I was trapped inâ€¦.dark, cold water. I willed myself to flout upwards, where the light seemed to be coming fromâ€¦..But it was a wall of ice. I pressed my hands on it. The ice began to crackâ€¦.Just one more pushâ€¦.

It's been five years now since Jack died. He fell into the cold depths of the water, saving me from drowning instead.

I stared at the white sheet of ice, wondering if Jack's body was still in there.
>His stick still was, resting on the very center of the pond, covered in frost.
I didn't have the heart to take it.
>Suddenly one part of the ice began to crack. What was happening?

The ice split open into a shape of a cross, and Hiccup thought he saw a wisp of mist rising out of the ice. Even though it had been over five years, a glimmer of hope filled me. I shook my head. Just a figment of my imagination. Jack was dead.

Finally! I'm outta here! Waitâ€¦.who's that? It can't beâ€¦.Hiccup?

_I squint my eyes, trying to confirm my guess. If it was Hiccup, he had grown a lot.
>The runt had grown taller, his auburn hair was longer. But those forest green eyes hadn't changed a bit. And those ridiculous freckles. The weird thing was, even though Hiccup was looking his way, he didn't seem to see him. Maybe he was deep it thought?

I walked cautiously on the ice, trying to keep my balance. Finally I reached where he was. Even though I was right in front of him, he still didn't notice me! What was with him?

"_Hiccup! I'm here! Can't you see me?"_

The winter air seems to have gotten chillier. Frost covered the pond's surface.
>Hiccup shivered, why was it getting so cold? The wind blew stronger, it's howling almost like someone talking. I imagined it was Jack, joking and talking like he did in the past.

_I began yelling and shouting at Hiccup, desperately trying to make him hear me.
>But he couldn't. I don't know why. I reached out to touch him, and the most shocking thing happened. My hand- it just past through. Likeâ€¦.I was a ghost. Was Iâ€¦?

I could almost swear that was Jack's voice. My imagination was going crazy again.
>It was getting too cold now. I decided to go back.
"Rest in Peace, my friendâ€¦"
>I murmured before slowly walking back home.

_He's leaving! No! Don't!
>Why can't you see me? Please!
Hiccupâ€¦.Don't leave me behind!_

Hiccup!

Jack?
